

St Barth's Le Barthelemy Hotel is Back

By Caribbean Journal Staff

St Barth's Le Barthelemy hotel is open again, with the island's reopening to U.S. tourism.

The boutique property on St Barth's Grand Cul de Sac has a total of 46 rooms and suites, many of which have private pools.

That's along with a dining program led by its signature eatery, Aux Amis, and its always-popular rooftop bar, Whiskey Tango Foxtrot.

"We've been patiently waiting to welcome our guests back to paradise and are thrilled our beautiful island is finally re-opening," says Marc Dobbels, managing director at Le Barthélemy. "We've taken this quiet time as an opportunity to create new amenities and offers that elevate the Le Barth experience with a focus on personalization and privacy—from introducing a new staff position, the dedicated 'Rose Butler,' to offering guests a personal yoga guru, private island car and enticing travelers to come visit us again with packages that make up for lost time."

St Barth is currently requiring all US visitors to show proof of vaccination and a negative PCR test taken within 72 hours before arrival.

For more, visit Le Barthelemy.